Re: Dover, et al. v. British Airways, PLC, No. 1:12-cv-5567-RJD-MDG

Dear Judge Dearie:

British Airways PLC ("BA") writes in response to the plaintiffs' April 6, 2017 letter requesting that the Court now set a trial date in this matter for after July 7, 2017. (Dkt. 250). The plaintiffs also indicated in their letter that they plan on filing a class notice plan within ten days.

These actions are premature for two reasons: (1) the parties' summary judgment motions and Daubert challenges are still pending, and all of those motions should be resolved before the Court sets a trial date and approves a notice plan, and (2) BA intends to file a petition under Rule 23(f) of the Federal Rules for leave to appeal the Court's April 4, 2017 order certifying a class. Accordingly, no action is required by the Court at this time.

First, BA's and the plaintiffs' summary judgment motions remain pending before this Court, as well as the parties' multiple Daubert motions. Those motions should be decided before the Court supervises dissemination of class notice and sets a trial schedule.

Second, BA intends to file a petition for review under Rule 23(f). Rule 23(f) provides this Court, or the Second Circuit, with discretion to stay proceedings in the district court pending resolution of an appeal of a class certification order. See Fed R. Civ. Pro. 23(f); see also Nat'l Asbestos Workers Med. Fund v. Philip Morris, Inc., 2000 WL 1424931, at *2 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 26, 2000) (granting Rule 23(f) stay because "the rule was designed to accommodate the need for quick appellate review of class certification decisions"). At the appropriate time, BA will file a motion for a stay.

Accordingly, the Court should decline to set a trial date or disseminate class notice at this time.
